MEDIA KIT

Our mission is found in chapter 58 of the book of Isaiah: To serve, heal, feed, teach, and clothe those who have the greatest need and to train others to do the same. We believe the greatest way to do this is through health education and humanitarian aid.

We offer health and outreach education to schools, churches, and corporations. Closely connected to our health evangelism training is our international work, where we have created a mission destination for our health consultants, helping schools and orphanages to become more self-sufficient through lifestyle education and agricultural development.

We are a team of mission-driven individuals with different backgrounds, varying from physicians to construction workers to ex-entertainment executives. Our diversity is matched only by our collective desire to reach the world in the most creative and dynamic ways possible with the love of Jesus Christ.

It is our belief that we have all been called to serve God and our fellow man, especially those who don't know of His love. We have spent years developing a chain of programs that are linked in such a way that move people from spectating to service. Our mission is to attract, train and equip soul winners to go anywhere for Jesus.

“We are a team of mission-driven individuals with different backgrounds with the collective desire to reach the world with the love of Jesus Christ.”

Airing on 3ABN's Dare to Dream Network, From Sickness to Health is not your average health program. So many programs have a few talking heads that articulate every good argument for healthy food and lifestyle, and while audiences may offer a tacit nod, they are often making the opposite point in their minds and stomachs: "but fried chicken and a little chocolate cake for dessert is SO delicious." This program breaks the mold by adding an angle you wouldn't expect: the viewpoint of Sickness.

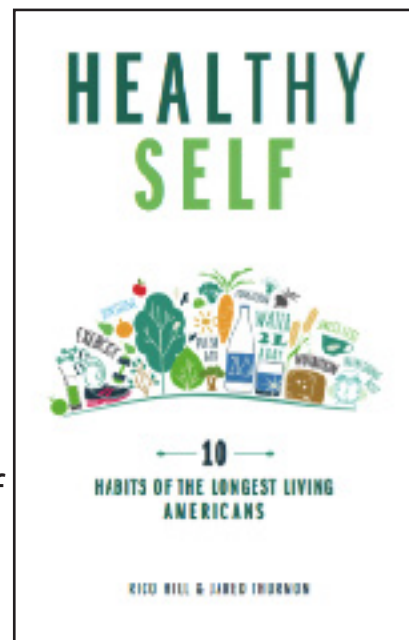

This program exposes what people actually think, but then gently addresses common misconceptions by sharing solid health principles from three very different sources: The Bible, good science, and the six o'clock news.

Inspired by the TV program, the From Sickness to Health seminar is a 5-day presentation of the TV program in a seminar format, strictly for the community, targeting the most difficult people to reach – atheists, millennials and the rapidly growing number of people who identify themselves as having no religious affiliation.

The thrust of the 5-day seminar is to cast God’s health principles as the most viable proclamation for better living, based on the strength of evidence seen in the quality of life of the people who follow these principles and are known as the longest living Americans, namely, the Seventh-day Adventists. Audiences are amazed to learn of the evidenced-based information compiled in five, dynamic presentations, utilizing up-to-date news videos, scientific research and the growing popularity of the Blue Zone studies, of which Seventh-day Adventists are the only one found in the United States.

During the 5-day From Sickness to Health seminar, audiences are invited to join the “cast” of the greatest story of their lives: their own journey of going from a life of sickness to one of health by applying the 10 principles of The New Life. This is perfect for a community outreach program and would lead up to an evangelistic effort in your church.

The Community Health Advocate Training (C.H.A.T.) Program is a one-of-a-kind course to prepare individuals, groups, and churches to conduct health education seminars. This course focuses on how to lovingly present the health message with tact, balance, and the necessary public speaking skills that easily make health education palatable for any audience. The training covers topics like natural remedies, hydrotherapy, and the science of cooking, while uncovering the beauty of Christ in the health message and the deeper reason why every church member has been called to take hold of medical missionary work.

The C.H.A.T. Weekend Workshop is an introduction to the gospel medical missionary work focused on debunking the myth of what a “medical missionary” is - a medical professional that provides medical assistance to impoverished persons abroad. It lays the foundation that every member of the church, no matter what his or her vocation may be, is called to be intelligent regarding disease, its cause, prevention, and cure, and encourages the audience to consider this broader view. The purpose of this is to galvanize the churches to take up this work as a part of every church evangelism project in order to reach the community for Jesus through the entering wedge Christ provided -- health.

The driving force behind our medical missionary training program, what we call the Community Health Advocate Trainer Program, is the idea that every member of the church should take hold of this work. The question we ask ourselves when developing programs or resources is “How can we make this accessible to every church member?” As a result of this particular question and the desire to see every person in the church actively engaged in winning souls for Jesus, the C.H.A.T. program was born!

The Beehive’s Community Health Advocate Training Program stands out from other medical missionary programs in many ways.

INTERNATIONAL

In addition to the work our consultants perform in their own communities in the United States, we recognize that there are those that desire to work internationally. With this in mind, we developed a mission destination in Haiti, run by well-trained and qualified missionaries for over five years. If international work is a desire we have made it our personal goal that Certified, C.H.A.T. Consultants will not be idle-- they are encouraged to go and assist in the gospel medical missionary work with schools, orphanages, and hospitals and help with lifestyle education and practical self-sufficiency training through agricultural education and set up. Although the emphasis is to have C.H.A.T. Consultants to assist in Haiti, anyone can participate in assisting the efforts of Beehive International in Haiti.

“I am the principal of Bass Memorial Academy and one year ago we took a group of about 30 adults and students to Haiti to run a medical clinic, plant trees, and build a house for a local resident. It was there that I met Jonathan Euler who works with The Beehive ministry in Haiti full time. It was my first time out of the country and the experience changed me. Not only did experiencing the culture of Haiti have a lasting impression, meeting and working with Jonathan had a profound impact on me. I saw an American who grew up with the luxuries I now enjoy forsaking them all to help others in far greater need. It was that steadfast commitment that impressed me so much. We struck up a friendship and I realized that he is the real deal. What The Beehive is doing there in Haiti is practical Adventism. They are spreading the gospel first by meeting peoples needs. It was a beautiful thing to witness. I hope those of you who have not had a chance to visit would strongly consider supporting this vital humanitarian ministry. Jonathan is willing, but he depends on those God has supplied with means to keep the work alive. Please consider giving to support this ministry!” - Phil Wilhelm

“Jonathan...I’m writing to tell you how valuable my experience was in working with you and your group in Haiti. I’ve seen many volunteer organizations and I have to tell you that the work you are doing in Port-au-Prince is among the very best. It is the work of the angels. I’ve never felt more welcomed, needed and valued as a volunteer. Your group doesn’t just work on the outskirts of poverty, you dive into the middle of it. It’s easy to see the difference that you are making over there. It’s in the physical improvements, but even more in the spirit of how you give; loving, caring, generous. It’s infectious. Thank you for letting me and my group be a part of it.” - Bob McCallan, ReliefQuest Int’l, Melbourne, FL
